Фото с трехмашиной – L-Service Transfusion-transmitted infection by transfusion-transmissible non-A, non-B hepatitis in an infant. Non-A, non-B (NANB) blood infection in a young adult caused by intravenous infusion of an allogeneic blood product from a 29-year-old pregnant woman and transmitted through a symptomatic mother and asymptomatic infant is described. During the 11-month follow-up the infant has remained healthy, but the mother's clinical course was complicated by autoimmune hemolytic anemia and immune thrombocytopenic purpura. The infant's serologic profile has not changed and the IgM antibody to hepatitis C virus by second-generation enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay has remained negative. Efficacy and safety of once-daily fluticasone furoate/vilanterol (fixed-dose combination) in COPD patients in real-life clinical practice. To evaluate the efficacy and safety of a once-daily combination of fluticasone furoate (FF)/vilanterol (VI; 100/25 mcg) in patients with moderate to severe COPD. Open-label, non-interventional, prospective, post-marketing study. We recruited patients from throughout Germany between June 2006 and November 2008. Patients with a clinical diagnosis of COPD were required to have an FEV(1) of at least 60% predicted, a history of exacerbations in the previous year, a chronic bronchodilator reversibility of at least 12% and a post-bronchodilator FEV(1)/FVC ratio of ≤ 0.7 . Patients (n = 737) were treated with FF/VI 100/25 mcg once-daily for 12 weeks. The primary efficacy outcome was the change in trough FEV(1). Change in trough FEV(1) was significantly greater with FF/VI than with salmeterol/fluticasone propionate (SFC) 200/50 mcg once-daily (difference in least squares [LS] mean difference [95% CI], 52 mL [20-82]; p = 0.002). Other measures of lung function, health status and rescue medication use were also significantly improved with FF/VI. FF/VI was generally well tolerated. Once-daily FF/
