The Board, which met earlier this week, made its views clear after it became apparent that the Union had launched a formal complaint against the President, including a possible formal investigation by the Student Discipline Process (SDP). The most pressing issue for the Board is the apparent lack of due process in the way the SDP handled the case. On behalf of the Board, the Chairman of the Board of the School of Management has written to the Chairman of the Cambridge Union Society to advise him to "rethink his stance" on the issue.
