When we insert a record in the database we use GUIDs as well. Because the GUID is unique this will cause the table to have a unique constraint. When inserting new records that is an insert select will be executed and a search for the GUID is executed to see if the record already exists. The problem we have is that if we have many records that are inserted the GUID comparison will take a lot of time. To avoid this, we turned off the GUID uniqueness. The problem is that when we did this we cannot update the GUIDs for existing records. The code to insert is like this TableInfo ti = new TableInfo(); ti.ID = Convert.ToInt32(data.Id); ti.Name = data.Name; ti.ProductName = data.Name; ti.Description = data.Description; ti.Version = data.Version; ti.SoftwareInstalled = data.SoftwareInstalled; ti.SoftwareVersion = data.SoftwareVersion; ti.IsCompatible = data.IsCompatible; ti.CompanyName = data.CompanyName; ti.InstallationSoftware = data.InstallationSoftware; ti.GUID = Guid.NewGuid(); db.Insert(ti); The existing record has the GUID null. How can we update the GUID column? A: Create a new temporary table, and INSERT your data into that table (before update). Then UPDATE the GUID in your original table. Q
