Charles Howard Butler Charles Howard Butler (November 27, 1856 – December 11, 1934) was an American chemist and industrialist who invented the first modern textile dye. Early life and education Charles Butler was born in Cincinnati, Ohio on November 27, 1856, the son of William Butler, a civil engineer, and Maria Frances (Fowler) Butler. His father died in 1872, and he left school at age 13 to help support his mother and younger siblings. He left school after three years, possibly due to his mother's illness, and began working at an icehouse in Kansas. In 1877 he met the chemist and dyer John L. Smith, who taught him the chemistry of dyes. In 1879, Butler traveled to Philadelphia to study dye chemistry with Smith and to work in the General Chemical Company. After two years in Philadelphia, he returned to Cincinnati to work in the tin plate and pipe and rail industries. In 1883, he married Emma Smith, and in 1884, with Smith as a consultant, he started a dyeing company, which was incorporated in 1887 as the American Dye Works. Inventions Myrobalan and India yellow dye Butler's original dye was a fuchsia dye. In 1887, he invented a new and distinctive dye that became known as Myrobalan and India yellow. This color combination was described as "the first genuinely new and original yellow to appear for years" by the American Dyestuff Reporter. The same dye was also described by the journal Chemical News as "a new dye and is a real novelty" and the report concluded that "the work of this firm,

January 10, 2557 BC - Hello. I just upgraded to Edius Pro 7 from version 6.5. I entered the serial number correctly when I was asked to do so, ... Well, of course, this is not exactly the patch that I wanted. And I can't access the Edius download server and I can't download the update. I can't change the boot system. I can't update the version. I can't install the new patch. So I decided to install it manually. I'm already fffad4f19a
