A rare case of acquired systemic lupus erythematosus associated with major histocompatibility complex class II antigen deficiency in a human immunodeficiency virus-infected patient. We report a case of a 32-year-old woman with a long history of human immunodeficiency virus type 1 infection and acquired systemic lupus erythematosus in whom the diagnosis was made by clinical and laboratory findings, which responded favorably to therapy with low dose prednisone and hydroxychloroquine. In this patient, the deficient expression of major histocompatibility complex class II was not a predisposing genetic defect but a consequence of the acquired
