You can add or change your contact information by visiting Calendar's interface provides a visual reminder of the status of your project and allows you to see the details of your schedule. Each project is listed as a series of events. Each event is entered as a series of "component" objects. Each component is simple text that describes the event. The actual graphic version of the component is not displayed on the screen, because it is not used in the printed output. In addition, you can reference other components by using the list of components which is visible on the screen. This allows you to see how the details of one event fits into the overall structure of the project. Each event contains a series of components. The component can be text, an image, or a combination of both. Your schedule can be viewed in two ways: 1. The combined and structured version will allow you to see the schedule at a glance. The event and its components are displayed as one item. The structure of the components is visible on the screen. The individual components are not displayed as graphics. 2. The unstructured version will give a more real-time view of what is going on. Advantages of iCalendar Desktop: New Features: 1. Calendar Title can be changed. 2. Event's description and location can be changed. 3. Both Time and
