Version: 2.7.1 File size: 2,334,928 bytes Description: Easy WebBrowser is an extremely basic web browser with a few features and one convenient shortcut. Easy WebBrowser doesn't save your browsing history, so it doesn't take up lots of disk space. Easy WebBrowser doesn't record your browsing history. Easy WebBrowser doesn't use an address bar or a search box. It's an extremely lightweight browser, so you can use it for your Web browsing with limited features. A straightforward browser that is simple to use and operates as expected While Easy WebBrowser is designed to be an extremely lightweight version of a regular browser, it operates much the same as a regular browser. Oddly, Easy WebBrowser cannot be resized and operates as quite a small window, although the window itself can be enlarged, but the browser doesn't expand to fill the window. A main aspect of Easy WebBrowser is how it doesn't record history in anyway, to save space on the hard drive and minimize the space issue caused by temporary files. However, it does have certain website addresses saved as standard that can be edited or changed, making it possible to quickly access favorite sites. A few features available, but not many, making the program operate in a specific niche Easy WebBrowser doesn't include many features, along the main toolbar there are only six icons available. Users can go back and forward between viewed pages, stop the loading of a specific page, as well as a bookmark feature. The only other available features are a Search Option, Refresh and the Home Page access shortcut. All other features are not present, making the application extremely basic compared to several other browsers. An interesting web browser, yet so minimalistic that it is really only a useful option for limited systems Since there are so many other web browsers available, including other lightweight browsers, Easy WebBrowser is inevitably going to be compared to a great deal of competition. Ultimately, the application lacks too many features to really be competitive and several other lightweight browsers

What's New in the?

Easy WebBrowser is a browser that runs very quickly, and very small. There is no record of history in any way, and no record of private data, and no space to save anything. The only thing saved is the actual web address and this is stored in a small folder. Easy WebBrowser is very basic, with only six buttons available in the tool bar. The address bar is the only way to access the web browser. The address bar will display the web address of the page currently being viewed. To access a different website address just click on one of the available buttons. Another feature available is the ability to jump to the web addresses of the sites you visit most frequently. The button is located in the top right hand corner of the screen. The back button and the forward button are also available. The back button will allow you to return to the previous web address that was viewed, and the forward button will allow you to access the website that was viewed immediately after the one you are viewing. The search button will perform a search for the text that you are entering into the address bar. A special feature is the ability to refresh the page. When the refresh button is pressed the page is automatically reloaded. The home button is the button that opens the home page. A home page can be set as the default page, and if you have one saved in the.txt format it can be used instead. Easy WebBrowser is very limited, however, it is a very small and lightweight browser. With the Internet being the backbone of modern life, it's not surprising that almost everyone now has a computer or tablet in their home. To those who own more than one computer or tablet, there's the problem of keeping them synchronised with a mobile app or website. Thunderbird is a desktop email application with web access, and has the unique ability to be used as an RSS feed reader or to subscribe to and read emails. The app is easily able to synchronise your email to your phone and use it as an email address, but there are limitations. The Email Synchronisation doesn't synchronise contacts, it simply synchronises your email address, it can also be used as a remote address and allows you to access your email on the web through your mobile phone. You can access Thunderbird through a web browser on your computer or mobile device, and access it via the native apps on Android or iPhone devices. Synchronise your emails with Thunderbird The app allows you to access your emails through a web browser, and this will synchronise any changes to your email addresses, to the app, and on your computer or device. This feature is provided through a tool called Lightning Connect which supports both POP and IMAP. While this is a great feature, it's somewhat limited because you can't have more than one Thunderbird account. When one account is being used you can't sync any changes
