CentriQS Exceedent QS |
CentriQS QS for Wap
Tuesday, December 22, 2014 If you had any doubts that both City Attorney Mike Feuer and the Los Angeles Police Department have come up with a plan for the Occupy LA encampment on MacArthur Park, they just have to look at the SOPs they posted on the LAPD Facebook page...
The message is clear: if you break the rules, you

risk arrest and being evicted. That's where the "occupation" of MacArthur Park ends. This is all by the book, it just isn't spelled out very well. The reality is that the rulebook from which the SOPs in the City Attorney's letter to the encampment administrators are drawn from, like the Austin City Council's SOPs, has been abused so often, most Americans don't even know what it is. It's something like this: When you occupy private property, you enter into a legal and public space that applies to everyone.

When you don't do what the rules require, you endanger everyone and give the police the right to remove you by force if you persist in your illegal behavior. LA is a different city than Austin.

In Los Angeles, an occupier can be removed without a warrant or notice at any time. In Austin, they have to be given 10 days notice before they can be evicted. We can expect all the

Release Notes

Documentation is a serious topic of debate, mainly because, when discussing documentations, there are so many shades of gray and so many conflicting

perspectives. On the one hand, the documenters and the documentees end up in a discussion about whether the documentation is enough, or whether it should be more comprehensive, or, why is this documentation included? On the other hand, without documentation, the developers and users could not know about the changes to the system. There's no consensus. So, instead of entering the debate, I will discuss two things which have been bothering me - documentation and more importantly, the release notes. There are many definitions for a release note, but a good release note could describe the following: What's new in the Release? Why do we need this Release? How to upgrade the system from the older versions? How to upgrade to a newer version? How to solve any problems? A good release note should aim at describing all these things, and not just the change log. Now, if the developer of the new Release mentions that it includes these functionalities, then the user is happy.

However, if it does not mention what's new, and he/she is required to find it out, then the user is upset, because the release notes should serve as the last guide. The release notes are often considered as an afterthought. After the deployment, the release notes are put on the website, and then, if the user finds out that the release notes does not mention an important issue, then he/she will be upset about his/her system upgrade. I have been feeling the pain of searching a release note after a server migration. Because, when a new release is coming out, the release notes are put on the website, and you find the URL of the new release notes. However, because a server migration results in a downtime and can take many days, it is difficult to find the URL for the release notes. I have written a simple script which is included in this blog post. This script downloads the URL for the release notes, and then, automatically puts it in Notepad for us to paste it into our browser.

In today's “stressed” culture, it seems like
hard time keeping their workforce happy and

satisfied, and this can sometimes lead to stress and anxiety within the office. Read this article to find out some methods that you can use to help you keep your team upbeat and uplifted, without it being too obvious. 1. Have a routine Everyone needs a routine; this helps with productivity and simply makes life easier. If your employees know exactly what to expect, they're

less likely to become anxious. 2. Have fun Everyone needs to smile and have a good time every now and then. Set up breaks for everyone or just get some candies.
When you have fun you can be more at ease and relaxed, so you can work and deal with all these issues that can sometimes come up. 3. Spoil people Everyone loves to be spoiled and indulged from time to time. It doesn't

have to be a huge thing, a short treat or treat a coworker by buying them lunch, a few seconds of their time or just a simple smile. Things like this are extremely easy to do and they put people in a good mood. 4. Show appreciation Appreciation goes a long way when giving regards to people. A little gift or a simple remark can show someone how much you care. Check my page for more tips on how to express appreciation to your employees. 5.

Lighten the mood

Sometimes, you simply need to change the mood to find balance. Team building, dance, plays or
