DotNetNuke Translator PC/Windows

DotNetNuke Translator is a simple software that you can use to quickly create translations of resource files in a DotNetNuke installation directory. You can use this application to translate all the DNN or just a component using the Google or Bing services. Additionally, you can create images of the original files in order to track changes. You can also add comments and metadata. This application extracts all the language files from the DotNetNuke installation, and generates a po file (the human-readable file) and a.pak file (the binary file). Let's say you want to translate the french version of a page. You can do it as follows: Start the DotNetNuke Translator by choosing "Translate an entire directory or component" in the start menu, on the "Help" page. Click on "Add items" Search for ".fr" or ".fr_FR" in the file system, depending on your language.

DotNetNuke Translator Installation: This tool is not a part of DotNetNuke Core. To use it, you must download it from the download page. This tool is not included in standard DotNetNuke installation options. To install it manually, just upload the zip file to the /DotNetNuke/Translator directory. To make it available through the start menu, you should add a Shortcut with the DotNetNuke Translator's name. Please note that the manual way is not recommended because it requires additional configuration.

Simple GUI: You can use this tool as a standalone application (without being part of DotNetNuke). It works with any DNN version (from 1.3 to 7.4) but it is tested only with DotNetNuke 7. This application offers a very simple interface:

Usage: Click the "Open" button to start the translation process, and the "Done" button to finish it. You can change the language version you're currently using in the textbox below the "Open" button. Once the process is done, click on the "Done" button to see the result.

Main Features: Add your own custom language files (or extract the language files from the DotNetNuke installation). Revert to the previous version of the translation without losing any of the changes that you had done

What's New in the DotNetNuke Translator?

You can use the tool to create resources for: An application A module A DNN application A DNN module A DNN application's pages A DNN module's pages A configuration file A configuration section DotNetNuke Translator Tool Download: To use DotNetNuke Translator, you must first download the tool to your computer. You can get the tool at the DotNetNuke Translator Download page, or you can use the free version of the DotNetNuke Translator to see if it is what you need. DotNetNuke Translator Screenshot: The application tool displays the original language and the target language. Click on the bold character for the original language. Click on the language dropdown to select the target language. You can see the translation here. In a recent piece for The Intercept, Jennifer Palmieri said she'd be "embarrassed" to speak for George W. Bush because of his "deeply racist and hateful rhetoric." On Sunday, she said it's understandable why Trump won. "It's not because he's a bigot," Palmieri said on CNN's "Reliable Sources." "It's because people are just not feeling good. We're thinking of them, not us." While the pro-Clinton pundit claimed "overwhelmingly Democrats are thinking about and preparing for themselves," fact-checkers have shown she's wildly overstating the truth. Palmieri said the election has become a "referendum on the economy," which is why "we're living in the midst of an awful time." She remarked it's "not a time" to be concerned with people's "deeply racist and hateful rhetoric." "I am really embarrassed and disappointed in George W. Bush," she said, for his "deeply racist and hateful rhetoric." The Democratic strategist said the former president's rhetoric didn't seem like the type of "kind, inclusive" language the country needed. And she said one of Trump's "cheerleaders" is likely to be the ◆
