Q: BizTalk 2006 WCF Adapter not working on XP BizTalk 2006 WCF Adapter works fine when I run it from command line on my Windows 7 box. However, when I deploy the same installer on a XP machine, the application fails to start (without throwing an error). Same happens when I run the same installer from Windows Server 2003 Server (vista doesn't seem to have problems). I'm wondering if there are some compatibility issues I haven't considered yet? My development box is a Windows 7, BizTalk 2006 installed on a separate partition. Running the installer on the test machine is a Vista. Both machines have the same SQL Server, and the same SQL Server instance. The client is deploying the application using a local BizTalk application and sending messages to and from another machine in the domain. Anybody has experiences like this before? Any tips or suggestions are welcome. edit: It should be noted that the application successfully starts and runs when I run it from the command line (which is how it should work).

However, running the application from the installed MSI package doesn't work at all.

SCC Caption Decoder

SCC Caption Decoder Serial Key (SCC Decoder) is a free utility that enables you to process the contents of SCC files. SCC files are a very common type of file format used in television. SCC files contain a timecode buffer (typically in a few different formats), which can be displayed in the same type of settings as Digital Video or Audio files. The timecodes can be used to create annotated transcripts of video content. For example, it is possible to add comments to video content. SCC Caption Decoder is a simple utility that doesn't require any specific skill to operate. Annotate Video Files Online and Export them As Annotated Text Files SCC

Caption Decoder is a utility that lets you convert the contents of SCC files into annotated text files. This means that you can add comments or other metadata to any video content by simply running SCC Decoder and pointing it at a file. The program will then translate the timecodes found in the file into the raw format they are in, and you can use it to create a text transcript of the content. SCC Caption Decoder supports several different timecode formats, including DVL CC, DVL, and CDL. The utility works by reading a video file, analyzing the timecode buffer, and creating a transcription of the audio and video content. By default, the transcript will be displayed as a line by line transcript, with timecodes included, but it is also possible to switch to a paragraph display mode that removes the timecodes and displays the transcript as a block of text instead. When you start the program, you are asked if you want to convert the file or not. If you select "Yes" instead, the program will immediately start working. This is a simple utility that doesn't require any specific skill to operate, and you are not asked to make any initial configuration in order to begin converting the file. SCC Caption Decoder Changelog: Version 1.3.4 - Added the ability to choose the location from where the transcribed file should be exported. Version 1.3.3 - Fixed a few small bugs and clarified the exportation to HTML/Cue Sheets. Version 1.3.2 - Fixed a few small bugs. Version 1.3.1 - Changed the program title. Version 1.3 - Added a watch folder function that scans a specific folder for new files to be converted. -
