Spring security: login page that does not reload when a user is logged out In my current Spring Boot project, the login page has the following structure: home.html -> /login.html My application makes use of session scoping to control user sessions: @Override public void setApplication(ApplicationContext applicationContext) { this.applicationContext = applicationContext; this.webApplicationContext = ((org.springframework.web.context.support.WebApplicationContext) applicationContext); } @Override public ApplicationContext getApplicationContext() { return applicationContext; } private WebApplicationContext webApplicationContext; Any GET requests on /login.html are intercepted using the following filter in web.xml: springSecurityFilterChain /* REQUEST FORWARD ERROR A redirect-url of /login is configured and the login page is navigated to via a POST request. This works fine and I can logout with a click on the logout button in the navbar. The session scopes are removed and the user is redirected to the homepage. However, I do not want to reload the login page in this scenario and also want to use Spring Security's OAuth2 login flow which requires the user to be redirected to /login. A redirect-url of /login is not allowed. How can I configure Spring Security to not reload the login page in this case? EDIT: If I logout with a click on a logout link, the following filter is used to secure the requests: @Bean public Filter springSecurity 09e8f5149f

1954–55 French Rugby Union Championship

The 1954-55 French Rugby Union Championship was contested by 38 clubs divided into four pools of 12 clubs each. The two finalists from Pools A and B meet in the final. The winner of the "B" pool was Perpignan. Context After the victory of the Perpignan in the previous year, the club has participated in the final. With the departure of the North Vannes, the second division is reduced to three pools with 12 clubs each and the knockout system is maintained. For Labour, Prime Minister David Cameron has promised to cut benefits to the richest and "go for broke" in cutting taxes. For the Conservatives, the keys to success in the election are turnout and the number of women voters. Many think the UK Independence Party
