U.S. District Court Judge Margaret McKeown's July 23 ruling makes clear that the EPA's removal of the new septic rules was invalid and that the EPA's approval of a new federal "appearance" rule is illegal. The decision also leaves in place a court order preventing the state from enforcing the old rules for up to three years. "We are enormously relieved that a federal judge has made the right decision on septic systems," said David Matthews, an attorney with the Center for Biological Diversity, which brought the suit against the EPA and the Idaho attorney general. "No parent would choose to allow their children to live in a home with a septic system, and Idaho has shown by its actions that that is exactly what it would allow. Families in septic-polluted areas will be able to breathe a little easier now that the new, correct rules have been placed in place." "This ruling should set a precedent for nationally binding federal control over states on other major environmental issues.
