Regular season The Boston team opened their season on December 15, 1918 at the Harvard Gymnasium in Cambridge, Massachusetts, with a 4–4 tie against the New York Americans. The Rangers had to drop out of the league for the season a few weeks later when their Boston Arena was deemed unsafe for NHL play. The arena was damaged during a fight between the supporters of two opposing hockey teams and it had been unusable for that season. However, the team was able to play a few exhibition games at Braves Field. Roster Franchise moves The Bruins played their first exhibition game on September 6, 1919, in Hartford, against the Americans. This was the opening game of a double-header with the Mohawks of Schenectady. The next day, the Bruins opened their season for the second year at Braves Field against the Americans on December 4, 1919. Schedule and results † The 1918–19 Boston Bruins season began on November 16, 1918, and ended on January 2, 1919. ‡ The Bruins played an exhibition game, as the Mohawks of Schenectady, against the Boston Bruins at Braves Field on September 6, 1919.
