Weighted integers sum

Here is a weighted integer sum problem that I have been trying to solve with no avail:

It is given that, $a_1 + a_2 + \dots + a_n = 1000$, where a_i are positive integers not necessarily integers. The question is, How can we find a_1?

A: The easiest way is probably to change the question: "Can we express 1000 as a weighted sum of positive integers where the weights are positive real numbers?" In this case, if we write your sum as $$10^{-1}+10^{-2}+...+10^{-1}=1000$$ Then the answer is clearly 10^0. one of them. Definitely the most "wtf is going on" moment of the entire year is this in the 5th inning. Melvin starts counting the runners again, only to realize that Krol had scored in the previous inning and now had 3 runs on the board and that he had given up the lead. The umpires join the show, and Melvin makes them dance (well, they sorta started dancing) to wrap up the game. So yeah, yeah….this is one of those episodes. It's pretty classic, and I'm sure we can go into a lot more detail on the whole subject, but I think you get the point. What do you all think? Any other episodes you can point out that might be worthy of a mention? Until next time! Advertisements Share this: Like this: LikeLoading... Heck gamesDetermining the Phenotypic Interplay of Antimicrobial Bacteria Is Relevant for the Duration of Infection and Assessment of Antibacterial Therapy. Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) and vancomycin-resistant Enterococcus (VRE) are the most common bacteria causing nosocomial infections, prompting the search for effective agents. However, bacteria form bacterial microcolonies, and bacteria have been found to undergo phenotypic changes during persistent infection, especially in patients receiving antimicrobial therapy. These changes, even subtle, might alter the susceptibility to antimicrobials. The objective of this study was to describe the changes in the susceptibility of one MRSA and two VRE strains to antimicrobials, and to determine the duration of colonization. Two MRSA and two VRE strains were inoculated in broth and cystic fibrosis sputum medium, and the CFU of each strain was determined over a 10-day period. At day 10, the time points with the highest and lowest CFU numbers were selected. The time of selection was correlated with the minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) of antimicrobials. Our results showed that the time of colonization correlated with the MIC in 8 out of 12 experiments. When evaluating the MICs of antimicrobial agents at the end of 10 days' duration of colonization and when monitoring the minimum duration of therapy to eradicate the pathogen, all obtained trends were therapeutic. (citation omitted). A reasonable defendant would have realized that the view it had a duty to correct was erroneous, but that it could escape liability by simply repeating the previously "correct"⬚albeit possibly erroneous⬚view. See id. at 659. The majority's principle is, as the court of appeals said, "arguably sound," but it is not "arguably sound" under the reasoning of Estes. The majority contends that since Estes was decided before the enactment of section 667.8, subdivision (c), and no one has been able to explain why the statute was passed, and because every statute that has been adopted has been stated to be a restatement 82138339de
