Functionality: Overall rating: SCANNER Description: Keyboard Add-On - Scanner is a small utility which enables you to send keystrokes by pressing a button on your keyboard. All you need to do is press the assigned button and the program sends keystrokes by default to various applications. If you want to send a keystroke to a specific application, you need to type in its name in the corresponding field and press OK. The program is free and comes with a pretty simple interface, which does not require any installation. However, you can't access its main settings. Simple interface Each button is represented by a picture which is displayed on the system tray. The interface is very easy to use, as there is no need to click any more buttons, you simply need to press the button you want to activate, then the corresponding application gets the keystrokes, as soon as you press another button, it sends keystrokes to the previous application. Stupidly easy to use The main settings are found in the system tray, where you will find a global button which takes you to the settings. This button is set to a key combination (Ctrl+K by default). Keystrokes are sent to the previous application automatically, as long as the previous application is still running. If the previous application is not running, it will be put into the background and the keystrokes will be sent to the new one. Scanner is a very simple application that will surely please most users. It will not leave any users disappointed at all, as it is extremely easy to use and does not contain any unnecessary options or settings. However, you may find yourself pressed for time, as the application does not send keystrokes to the previous application until it is actually closed. Conclusion If you are looking for a program that can be used for sending keystrokes to various applications, then Scanner is the ideal solution. It is simple, reliable, easy to use and comes with a very simple interface. You can use it without any glitches and have fun. KEYMACRO Description: Keystrokes Sending - We all know that you can easily send keystrokes to different applications by pressing Ctrl+K on your keyboard. Well, this program is just like that, but it has a somewhat strange implementation. Basically, all you have to do is assign a combination of keystrokes to a button, which can be pressed by yourself or any other user 80eaf3aba8

What's New In Objdesktop?

The innovative program was built to allow users to apply animated backgrounds to their desktop. The utility is characterized by a user-friendly interface and, as such, enables you to place on your screen most of the programs' animated backgrounds (snow, rain, autumn leaves, stars and butterflies). It is also possible to interact with them, as well as remove them with a single click of the button. In addition to that, the system can be configured to increase the number of butterflies that appear on the screen and also to control the refresh rate, minimum and maximum size of items.
