Shore of the Everglades National Park, Florida The Everglades: Big Changes on the Menu Article and photos by Peter Heffernan Sue Hollimon and Kristin Briesemeister took a break from hatching new beehives on Wednesday, Jan. 29, 2010, to hike on the Everglades in the Florida Keys. They discovered a new set of wetlands of sorts on their hike, which might just offer a solution to help re-create Florida's unique Everglades. "Everyone is fixing the Everglades," Hollimon said after she and Briesemeister finished their hike. She went on to explain that their drive from Palm Beach, Fla., back to their home near Miami was mostly overland, but a few days earlier they stopped in Key Largo to hike through the backcountry, and stumbled upon a large section of marshy terrain. Q: Corona SDK: How to capture touchscreen events? I am making a game for iPhone and Android. I am using CoronaSDK for both. I want to implement a feature like the one in Angry Birds where you tap the screen to launch the next bird (or blast the previous one). I would like to do this with Corona, but I don't know how to capture the tapping event and make the next scene appear. I can do the whole app for Android. A: It appears from the order you're asking about that you're looking for Corona event mechanisms. These are described at Basically, there are two methods to support touch on the device (which would be the display of an iPhone or Android):

TouchCapture.begin(); This allows events to get passed to your Corona event handler. var e = Event("foo", { touch = {x:0, y:0, id:12345} } TouchCapture.end(); This makes Corona wait for all the events to be returned before resuming normal operations. This is useful for debugging. You can get the x and y of the touch by examining the TouchCapture object, or pass it directly to a Box2D.PolygonBody or a Box2D.CircleShape. A: Use touchCapture.begin() and touchCapture.end() to block GUI from rendering until all touches returned. Laser-assisted in situ keratomileusis to correct myopia and astigmatism. It was just a few years ago when the reality of reality television was ridiculed. No one has an idea what the early audience for shows like The Real World, Road Rules, The Bachelor, and The Bachelorette actually expected to get out of it. What they got was visceral reactions, true. But you have to remember that with the explosion of reality, we've seen so much for a whole new generation of viewers. You may have been watching these reality shows since the beginning and the new ones hit the air just a few years ago. When I started running after the genre in a serious way, I would go through TV Guide and look for the new reality shows and would jot down the episodes that had just aired, looked into ways to get an advance copy, and then try to get producers to contact me so that I could cover what was coming up in the world of reality TV. My Peeks Into The Future In Perspective Fast forward a few years and a brand new crop of reality stars were hitting the airwaves and the global phenomenon of reality TV took a whole new turn. My colleagues at The Daily Beast and I finally had the opportunity to head into the various reality shows with our camera equipment and find out what it was like for our newest top-rated casts. As we've reported in the past, here's a list of some of the shows that will premiere over the next few months.
