What's New in the?

CSV Splitter is a free and quite powerful utility, which allows you to split any CSV file quickly and easily. It converts multiple files at once, so you can easily split a large number of files at once. It also works with CSV files that contain commas and special characters, which was not possible with the previous versions. DownloadSince Texas' justice of the peace in Constable Plaza opened its doors on Jan. 1, the venue's new owner says he's been overwhelmed by the positive response from the Austin area, including from local lawyers. Alex Nutt, who purchased the Constable franchise — the fifth in the state — for $250,000 in October, said he's looking forward to bringing Constable to a larger, broader base of users. "The reception we've received has been phenomenal," Nutt said. "It's exactly what we set out to do." Nutt, who previously owned a builder's supply business, founded Constable in April 1999 with four offices in Plano. Since then, he said he's been working with the franchisees, going through the business plan and rebranding. The franchise had about 400 active users during the final month of its existence. Now, Nutt said he's looking to get the number to 1,000 users. The 60-acre Constable Plaza site is on the northwest corner of Highway 71 and Lavaca Street and is now home to a 7-acre park, a post office, grocery store and a branch of the University of Texas-Pan American. Before Constable was purchased by Nutt, he said he worked with developer Craig Wells on a deal that would have brought in $50 million worth of redevelopment. "I always said I wanted to have a hand in growing the community here," said Nutt, who previously owned Nutt Roofing in the Austin area. But the deal fell through after Wells pulled out of the project. "I was disappointed with the developer," Nutt said. "I think they ran into more trouble than they anticipated." When Wells came back in 2013 to revive the project with a $40 million redevelopment, the Constable real estate wasn't available at the time. Wells put the project on hold and launched Constable Central instead. While Constable Plaza is the only location owned by Nutt's partnership company, he said he's also looking to purchase Constable Central for the other four locations in the greater Austin area and might be interested in selling one or
