What's New In?

YeaXploitation is a utility to help you make your own adventure maps, levels, and dungeons, all for free. (A multiplayer version also exists) YeaXploitation is a complete custom adventure making package; it contains all the tools you need to create your own custom map. The game's name "YeaXploitation" is derived from the phrase "Yea, We're Open!", a common reaction that people have when they discover that the creator of the software is actually a female. The program allows for three main types of input: creating a new map, editing an existing map, or searching for a map on one of the available bases. It also allows for maps to be easily attached to one another, and allows for maps to be compressed in some fashion (optional). Editors Map Types The YeaXploitation editor currently allows you to: Create a new map Add various objects to a map Add rooms, enemies, treasure chests, items, exits, and entrances to a map Add brushes to a map Delete rooms, enemies, treasure chests, items, exits, and entrances to a map Add walls to a map Open doors to a map Display a map's properties Import objects from other maps to a map Create a new room Edit a room's properties Add objects to a room Delete objects from a room Delete a room Undo and redo a map's entire contents Open door animations Create a new map editor New Features A unique feature of YeaXploitation is that it is a programmable file format. This means that not only can you create your own game, but you can have other people create their own game from within your map editor. To do this, you must write a script to configure a door, and then be able to bind a keystroke to it. Other features include being able to add custom exits to your maps, and to dynamically change an object's position in a map (if the object is not linked). History Version 0.1.0 (2003-06-29) Version 0.2.0 (2004-04-27) Added editor and map directories Added an option to turn on global variable access Added an option to turn off the editor's title bar Added a menu item to the editor's options menu Added an option to control the compression level of the editor's files Added a menu item to the editor's options menu Added a directory where users could place their own textures Added an option to lock the editor's scroll bars Added the ability to change the color of the editor's scroll bar Added an option
