Up2Date is an open-source application that can be installed on a web server and will notify the users whenever an update for a given application is available. As mentioned earlier, one of the drawbacks with this application is the fact that it is a Windows application. This makes it unsuitable for use on an Android phone or tablet. However, there is a version of the program for the mobile environment. This version is a Java application, but does not need a web server. A quick search through the up2date website will give you an idea of what it is capable of. Unlike the main website, the mobile version is only available on the Google Play Store. For this reason, you cannot directly download it from the main website. The link will redirect you to the Google Play Store page. You will need to choose the application and then click the Install button. A few seconds later, the application will be downloaded and installed on your Android phone or tablet. Once you run the application, the main menu will automatically open, showing you the app categories. From here, you can view and install updates for the installed apps. The application also enables the user to subscribe to their favorite programs. This means that you will be notified whenever updates for these programs are available.
