Successful Intracranial Teratoma (epidermoid cyst) Under Transcranial Doppler Guidance. Intracranial teratoma (IT) is an extremely rare tumor, with only approximately 100 cases reported in the literature. The outcome of IT in adults has been dismal, most patients having a fatal evolution. In cases of viable IT, preoperative hypervolemic hemodilution (HVD) with intraoperative hypervolemic hypercoagulable states have been suggested as treatment of choice. A 38-year-old male patient was admitted to the emergency department with weakness on the left side of the body. Neurological examination revealed a left hemiparesis and a motor aphasia. In the computed tomography scan, a high-density mass located in the right temporal and parietal lobes was found. On cerebrospinal fluid analysis, the protein level was normal, and oligoclonal bands were present. The tumor was initially thought to be a glial neoplasm. However, since the patient underwent a surgery, final histopathology revealed a benign IT. Intraoperative transcranial Doppler monitoring demonstrated a decreased cerebral flow velocities in the affected hemisphere and the persistence of normal velocity in the contralateral side. HVD in conjunction with systemic hypercoagulable state could prolong the time for tumor reabsorption. The present case is a first report of IT treated by successful transcranial monitoring.

Q: CakePHP 3.0: How to use a custom shell command? I want to run a custom shell command in CakePHP using CustomShellCommand. For CakePHP 2.x, I do this: `$command = new CustomShellCommand(); $command->shell('cake bake view myView');` But, in CakePHP 3.0: `$command = new CustomShellCommand(); $command->usingShell('cake bake view myView');` the shell command is still not working. How do I make shell commands work? A: `$command` is (or should be) an instance of `ShellCommandInterface`, which is a subclass of `Shell`. So, you can't use `bake` in the call to `Shell::shell`. Instead, use the `bake` method of `ShellCommandInterface`: `$command = new CustomShellCommand(); $command->bake('view','myView`

Conjugate addition of aryllithium to styrene: enantiodiscrimination with chiral phosphoric acid. Treatment of achiral styrene with (R)- or (S)-1-phenyl-1-phenylethyllithium in the presence of (S)- or (R)-bis(triphenylphosphine)oxazoline as a catalyst afforded the corresponding aryllithium stannates (S)- and (R)-[2,2',2'

'2"-tetrakis(triphenylphosphine)oxyacetophenone-1'-stannyl]. These reagents were found to be efficient for the enantiodiscrimination of aryllithiums with phosphoric acid. Among the aryllithiums tested, (S)-1-phenyl-1-phenylethyllithium reacted relatively more rapidly than (R)-1-phenyl-1-phenylethyllithium with phosphoric acid, and the subsequent enantioselective addition with (S)- and (R)-1-phenyl-1-phenylethyllithium provided enantiomerically enriched stannane (S)- and (R)-[1-(phenyl)eth-1-yl]phenyl(R)-stannane-2,2'-diyl-bis(triphenylphosphine) over 9 days. The present method was found to be applicable for the enantiodiscrimination of aryllithiums prepared by the Grignard method.
