There are 21 files and folders in the pack. All files are in MP4 format and have a video resolution of 1280*720. The smallest file is music_files_00054.mp4, which is 4.00 MB in size. Now I have to convert the pack to MKV (the Apple TV has only H.264) with the following command line: (12>~) for i in Music_Files*[1-3] ; do mp4box -to avs -qt - "$i" && mplayer "$i" -fs -quiet -b:v 5 -vo 'xvimagesink' -volococontrol'al=shortest' -zq -idct 12 -c:a mp2 -Bdvd-tray -Bdvd-closedown; echo done; Unpack the album with your favorite archive tool and it should be ready for iTunes. .The present invention relates generally to a laser apparatus, and, more particularly, to a scanning laser apparatus which utilizes one or more deflector mirrors to deflect a laser beam along its optical path. Laser scanning systems are known, particularly in document or image reproduction apparatus. In one type of laser scanning system, a high power, low energy laser beam is generally generated and directed to a mirrored surface which is displaced by the rotation of a scanning motor driven polygonal mirror. The mirrored surface reflects the laser beam in a generally forward direction which is the direction of laser beam travel when in a reflected mode of operation. In such a laser scanning system, the beam is typically reflected from the mirrored surface over the entire surface of a recording medium to form a modulated spot which moves in a generally forward direction across the recording medium. The overall dimension of the mirrors, as well as other components of the laser scanning system and their respective relative positions, is determined by the spacing of a motor control element as is generally known in the art. In some laser scanning systems, the beam is scanned in a forward direction over the entire recording medium. However, in the case of plotters, it is necessary to scan the beam in a reverse direction to scan data corresponding to a portion of the recording medium. The data is scanned with the same laser beam and then is reflected in a forward direction back to a projection system. In another type of laser scanning system, a high power, high energy laser beam is generated which is directed through an oscillating deflector such as a rotating polygonal mirror. The beam is reflected from the deflector and refocuses so that the beam is directed to the recording medium. An acousto-optic modulator is positioned in the path of the laser beam so that the frequency of the reflected beam is modulated to reflect the data onto the recording medium. In general, such an acousto-optic modulator is fixedly mounted so that the position of the acousto-optic modulator is not changed during scanning operations. In such a laser scanning system, it is preferable to maintain the light source or laser beam fixed relative to the deflector to maintain a constant beam quality, and therefore constant data density, during the scanning operation. This also reduces the number of misregister operations and decrease the requirement of time for rotating the deflector about its axis. Therefore, it would be advantageous to have a laser scanning apparatus which utilizes a
