This paper describes the results of examination of 2442 Hans from four regions of the Ukraine: Lvov-Odessa, Lugansk and Dnipropetrovsk regions. The populations of the regions surveyed in terms of genetic characteristics of autosomes and X-chromosome are compared with the populations of these regions of Hungary. A similarity was found both in the frequencies of the haplogroups and the distribution of the pair and single loci haplotypes. The maps of the differences in the frequencies of the most representative haplogroups were drawn. The percentage of the haplogroup I between those found in the Hungarian and the Ukrainian populations was equal to 65.2 per cent. For the haplogroup H1, the percentage was 68.8 per cent and for the haplogroup R1 it was 72.1 per cent. A similarity in the patterns of distribution of the haplotypes of the three loci loci D7S8, D21S11 and D3S13 was found between the Hungarian and the Ukrainian populations. The haplotypes of these loci have been found both in the Hungarian and the Ukrainian populations. Furthermore, a similarity in the distribution of the pair loci haplotypes was found both in Hungary and in the Ukraine. The haplotype MKM in the autosomes was found both in Hungary and in the Ukraine. But the distribution of the haplotype of the X-chromosome TPA has been found only in the Hungarian populations. The haplotype OVX was found both in the Hungarian and the Ukrainian populations. There were no substitutions of TPA with the haplotypes OVX, HOA or OVS.
