"FIFA in my 30 years of making games has always been about the fans and delivering on gameplay concepts and I'm incredibly excited to see the game, now in development, built on the inputs and data from Real World Players," said Peter Egger, senior producer at EA Sports. "The idea of using real-world data to truly enhance the in-game experience for those who play FIFA has been a dream for us to achieve and I can't wait to see the fans' reaction to the innovations that are sure to arise from this." • For the first time in franchise history, the FIFA Team Leader is featured in the lead announcer role, as Ellerbeck provides commentary on every action in the pitch. His team of commentators includes Henrik Larsson, Eric Cantona, Jamie Carragher, Gary Neville and Henry, as well as newly announced commentators Kevin Keegan and Jorge Valdano. • New to the FIFA Ultimate Team mode is the ability to purchase packs in the Ultimate Team store, which will allow players to collect, train, match up and customise players of their own. • In Ultimate Team, players can take part in new global leagues and play through regional tournaments as well as domestic cups. These new competitions, to be introduced in FIFA 22, allow players to take on their favourite teams from across the world and face-off against clubs from their own country. • Using new strategic decisions, players will now build FIFA Ultimate Team teams that will remain active for a period of time, so that players can always make the right purchase for any given moment. • New momentum-based gameplay has been introduced with a focus on dribbling. Players have a new intuitive control scheme that allows them to fake and spin away defenders. When advancing at speed, pass to a teammate who is further up the pitch and who will be able to take advantage of a defender's momentum. • The FIFA Trainer has been redesigned to include four new game modes: Online Manager, Coaching, Online Coach and Online Tour. Additionally, the Trainers have been re-grouped into 14 meaningful topics, including Attack, Defence, Midfield, Goalkeeping, Set Piece, Balance and Finishing. • A new AI system has been introduced to game for the first time in FIFA, allowing players to see how their talents compare to the current AI, and how the AI will react to their tactics. The new AI
