Flickr has a vast collection of Photoshop images that often show the basic steps needed to transform a photo into a professional-looking one. In addition, the Creative Cloud, as part of its offerings of Photoshop and other art-related applications, has the full range of tutorials and over two hundred tutorials that run the gamut from simple filter techniques to heavy Photoshop use and retouching. Photoshop is expensive, but the tools and features it offers make it more than worthwhile. For example, Photoshop's Lens Blur tool — used in the previous section — lets you blur an image with up to nine different modes. It's a nice feature to experiment with as you learn. In the same section you see how to overlay a copy of an image over another image — great for creating new images — or for new type of effect. Creating a Backdrop in Photoshop Creating a backdrop is an easy way to dress up a photo of a special place, such as a homecoming dance. A backdrop is a simple picture with no objects in it. The best backgrounds for backdrops are generally sunset photos or images that you can easily crop. Find a picture you want to use for a backdrop on a photo sharing site. Then, using the Edit Image command, crop a small piece out of the picture to use as a backdrop. When you save the image as a Photoshop document, the PSD file includes the original picture surrounded by a white background — perfect for adding to images you want to edit. In this example, you see a photo of a room (Figure 2-1) that you want to use as a backdrop. The image file is called Wedges_for_bases.jpg. Figure 2-1: You can take a photo of a room and crop it to use as a backdrop. 1. Create a new document and import the image (Image ⇒ File ⇒ Open). 2. Press the Home tab and click the Crop tool, and then select the Rectangular Marquee tool. 3. Click the Crop area to select all the background that you want to keep. The original image appears with a white background. 4. Click the Preview button at the bottom-left corner of the screen to view the image as it will appear in the final image. Click OK to close the preview. 5. Click the Border button on the Tools panel and click the Make Static button in the Options bar. Click OK

Quote of the Day "Giving a shit is the best resume." – Jamie Foxx Sunday, September 10, 2014 DiaBee I couldn't bring myself to post anything today. I really should. There's something so empty about being in the middle of a workout and knowing that you're wasting your time. Tomorrow's Monday, and I'm actually kind of hungry. I had a meeting today. A scheduling meeting for a network for a network. I don't really know how to describe it, except to say that I came away with a headache. And feeling kind of weird. I really need to sleep. Other than that, I'm still trying to get my thoughts together about the text messages. It'll be ok, I guess.Group: For all of you who keep getting multiple CA's when you go to the web page that shows the names of your users, be sure to change your software to point to the right CA (e.g. 8.8.8.8). Once you do that, log on and you'll find that you shouldn't get multiple CA's each time. Each new profile will be from the correct CA. If it doesn't work right away, give it a little time. Thanks. BillServer Maintenance Slater & Gordon was disappointed at the manner in which the medical cannabis application was approved, late in the day, with only cursory and superficial inquiries by the Medical Board. We are therefore quite disheartened at the fact that our clients' application was not granted yesterday by the Queensland Government. Slater & Gordon is disappointed that the Queensland Government denied our client's application, late in the day. Slater & Gordon has advised our client, however, that they do not intend to appeal the decision of the Queensland Government. It appears that we have received approval for two dispensaries, and that the Queensland Government intends to award licences for up to a further eight. We believe that the Queensland Government will now be in a position to consider the seven other applicants. The fact that the decision has been made by Cabinet, and not by the Minister, is entirely in keeping with the correct working of the Government's process for making decisions. At this stage, all we can comment is that there is ongoing work on the issue, and that, hopefully, there will

In communication systems including mobile terminals, problems often arise due to the non-ideality of the communication channels between the terminals in the system. The non-ideality of the communication channels is generally caused by the real-world non-idealities of the communication channels, which include, for example, bit-error and interference due to channel fading, delay, and channel bandwidth non-uniformity. FIG. 1 shows a block diagram of a conventional communication system 10 including a transmitter 12 and a receiver 14. The transmitter 12 of the communication system 10 transmits information bits to the receiver 14. The transmitter 12 includes a coder 16, a channel encoder 18, and a modulator 20. The coder 16 maps the bits to be transmitted into codewords of m bits using an error correcting code. The channel encoder 18 further processes the codewords, for example, by using error correcting codes to generate codewords of n bits. The modulator 20 modulates the codewords to generate a signal vector y . Typically, a given signal vector y is obtained according to $(y=Fy)$ in which the function F maps codewords to signal vectors. The receiver 14 includes a demodulator 22, a channel decoder 24, and a channel deinterleaver 26. The demodulator 22 recovers the signal vector y from received signal vector x . The channel decoder 24 processes the recovered signal vector y , for example, by using a soft decision decoding method to generate soft information bits. The soft information bits are used by the channel deinterleaver 26 to deinterleave the signal vector y to generate the decoded bit vector d' . The decoder 24 further processes the bit vector d' by using an error correcting code to generate the bit vector d . In the system 10, the channel deinterleaver 26 is used to deinterleave the signal vector y to facilitate more accurate decoding of the codewords. If the channel deinterleaver 26 interleaves the signal vector y , i.e., interleaves the respective bits of the received signal vector x to form the signal vector y , the demodulator 22 can recover the signal vector y that includes a greater number of correct bits than the number of bits in the codewords. In this example, the interleaving process is performed by reversing the order of the bits in the signal vector y . Because the number of bits of the signal vector y can be smaller than the number
