.india Updated: Nov 04, 2019 07:08 IST Former Delhi Police commissioner Neeraj Kumar and his aide Satish Kumar, who is facing allegations of corruption in Satish Verma's murder case, have gone missing since Friday, police said. They were last seen in a lift on the tenth floor of Delhi's Central Prison on November 2, according to prison sources. Police are working to trace them. Kumar and Satish, who were on hunger strike in the prison, turned up their phones at 8am on Friday and did not reply to any text messages. Kumar and Satish were named in a First Information Report (FIR) on the alleged murder of Satish's wife, Sangeeta Verma, on November 1. Kumar had retired as commissioner of Delhi Police in 2013, when Satish took over as the head of the Crime Branch in the Delhi Police's Anti-Corruption Branch (ACB). Kumar and Satish were both directors of Parkview Nursing Home, which he allegedly used as a front. Police had claimed that Satish and Sangeeta Verma killed their respective spouses - Satish's brother-in-law and Kumar's niece - in a similar fashion. Kumar's and Satish's families had repeatedly told the Delhi Police that they would only speak to the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). But the investigating agency, which, in the past had received complaints against the two accused, had neither interrogated them nor filed an FIR against them. During the trial in the double murder case, Satish had revealed that Kumar had allegedly offered him a sum of money to solve the case, the copy of the transcript of their conversation in the prison shows. His lawyer, DS Shetty, had then alleged that a police officer in the ACB was involved in the killing and had offered the two accused to close the case in return for money. "Satish might have figured out that Kumar was trying to bribe him and flee. This was a possible reason why he had gone missing," said an officer who is part of the investigation team. What's that you say? You're tired of the wall-to-wall, freak-you-out, sitcom mayhem, the surreal slapstick of reality television, the Field of the Invention This invention relates to a semiconductor memory device having multiple input lines which are provided for each bit line pair. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, there has been an increasing demand for semiconductor memory devices such as dynamic random access memory (DRAM) devices. In an integrated circuit such as a DRAM device, the memory cell arrays are arranged in a matrix. Each memory cell includes a capacitor and a transistor
