Developed by the extremely creative person behind Adobe's world-class Lightroom software, Imagine provides a similar, but less powerful feature set than Photoshop. Although Imagine might not be your first choice for image editing, it can serve as a simple image editor to quickly crop an image or make simple fixes. Time to fit a new restraint system -? Is there a difference between damage due to solid material versus live items? I've got a scaffold which appears to be toast, but a couple of weeks ago I had to replace a guy because he fell out of the scaffold onto a car. Although the car was undamaged, we can't prove whether the accident caused the scaffold to be damaged or the other way around. I've read that a scaffold can be damaged by a falling material, whereas a falling live item makes a mess. Has anyone else experienced this? 2 Replies When you install a scaffold, don't forget that it is fixed at the top and the bottom. If the bottom drops or gets lifted, then you have a problem. If the top drops, then you have less of a problem, but some scaffolding is "sister" to the work area. You know, "The capo may not be on top of the keyboard, but that doesn't mean you can't play the guitar." Tim - this is the thing I was thinking but hadn't seen any posts re that. Most of the scaffolding I see are robust, solidly built. Do you think that they are designed to survive a fall? I'd imagine that the metal clips and beams that hold them up are what can break off. That's not a problem in my situation, since the scaffold is not near the work area, but could still be a problem with a hard but narrow item hitting the scaffold. I guess the question is: what makes a hard item dangerous? I have seen them damaged by live loads like when people can walk around on the scaffold, or when people jump off of them, they can fall and catch the scaffold on the way down. But I have not seen this with falling loads like falling sheet rock. I guess it all depends on what kind of material it is. There are a number of things that some of you may not know about my son (I will include hyperlinks). He is bipolar (as well as ADHD) and he has been in and out of groups and hospitals since he was 3. This creates a challenge for him, as I have to deal with a list of medications that affect the other guy, as well as be mindful about his effects on them. He has had 3 stays in juvenile hall, and even though he doesn't remember the stays, he gets extremely upset if I
