Download now for free!Turning 3.0, also known as 3.0.4, is very much still on the way, but the majority of users are already getting it. The latest maintenance release has some great user experience improvements such as a simple name page and a list of your created nodes. The full changelog can be found below, but I will highlight a few below. The bulk of the outstanding issues have already been resolved and turned into the next version. No more service upgrade message If you've ever started your node in Horizon, you were told that a service upgrade was in progress. However, it had nothing to do with the node or anything to do with its configuration. This was a minor UX decision to direct users to other actions before upgrading the node itself. In most cases the message didn't even belong on the page, but it was added in many cases in the past without being properly vetted as a message belonging on the page and not something to be confused with. For reference, we ask for a confirmation if you're upgrading core services (Web, Mail, Calendar, Contacts). Now this is a very rare exception, so if you get a message you should understand what it means and respond accordingly. Simple name page If you've ever created a node and forgot its name (or been mistaken for someone else), you know what a nightmare it can be to find it later. This has been a pain point for quite some time and developers have been getting creative. Now there is a simple name page instead of a search. This will make it a lot easier to find your node without having to resort to a search. List of your created nodes In a previous version of 3.0 you would only be able to see if there was anything waiting to be processed by the node. Now you can see if there are any nodes created by you. This includes things like paypals or manual payments. This helps you avoid running your node forever, which can sometimes happen if you don't have a valid node key.
