Letters to the editor In final days of job as a priest It's not surprising the Archdiocese is bringing Father Michael Dearing into private ministry or into one of the parishes in order to smooth the way for his appointment as pastor of a new parish, the Church of the Transfiguration on Lewis Street. Dearing wasn't a good priest, and, if we're to be charitable to him, he was struggling with his mental health. He was expelled from the seminary because of excessive drinking and other problems. Dearing was not chosen to be one of the Catholic men featured on the 2004 "Christ Mass" CD. What's more, he was ordained in 2002 by Cardinal Sean O'Malley, who's now the archbishop of Boston. To replace Dearing, the church of the transfiguration will invite Dearing's friend Rev. Timothy McManus to preach in the pews, and McManus will even be welcome to celebrate Mass in the church. It's only right to ask, what's in it for McManus? The Archdiocese is trying to make it look as though the church is going to benefit from Dearing's past, but Dearing's reputation for being an "ignorant" priest, for not going far enough in confronting violence against women and gays, and for being a "drunk" priest is not going to be corrected by having McManus preach in the church. The archdiocese has also been criticized recently for its handling of sexual-assault cases. And now they want to have an outsider as a pastor. It's as if the archdiocese is drawing up a new offering in order to make Dearing look like a saint. With all this, who will donate to the parish's $1.1 million campaign to build a new church? One hopes that Archbishop O'Malley and his staff will scrutinize the $1.1 million carefully enough to make certain it will go to the actual construction of a new church and not to a minister's salary. The archdiocese should not have gone this route to replace Dearing. Mr. Bartone is a reader of the Faith Leader.
