Barcode Label Builder is a barcode label application that allows you to print barcode labels on a Word document. The program has an intuitive interface and it is particularly useful for processing a large quantity of data. Moreover, the application lets you save the attached barcode file in PDF format. Barcode Label Builder Key Features:

- Integrated Barcode Labels Barcode Label Builder supports a range of barcode formats and font types. There is no limit for quantity of the labels on one page.
- Margin of Printing With Barcode Label Builder you can print your data in an easy and accurate way. To customize the appearance of the barcode labels, you can use the regular template library.
- Instant Printing Select your barcode label template and print your labels in a single step.
- Batch Processing Barcode Label Builder is an ideal tool for batching and printing. All the labels are automatically created by the batch printing function in the application.
- Redundant Printing Due to the small size of a barcode label, it is not necessary to print them on both sides of the sheet. The redundancy function in Barcode Label Builder helps you to save paper and ink.
- PDF Formats You can also save the attached barcode files to PDF format. This feature can be applied to almost all barcode types.

Barcode Label Builder Limitations:

- Delayed Barcodes To print some barcodes, the application needs a time to align the data before printing. To resolve this, you can use the Time Delay function.
- Transparency Barcode Label Builder supports only PDF barcode types.
- PDF Tools Barcode Label Builder is not an image converter. You cannot convert non-PDF formats to PDF format. Q: How to validate an instance method in an abstract superclass? I have an abstract superclass, and an abstract sub-class. In sub-class, I want to validate method, which returns true, or false. Before to use AbstractSubClass, I first check superclass's method from the subclass.

if (isValid(AbstractClass.class)) {
    AbstractSubClass.super.myMethod();

I cannot call AbstractSubClass's static method directly. Is there any other way to solve this issue?

A: You can use reflection to do what you want. For your specific case:

```
if (isValid(AbstractClass.class)) {
    if (AbstractSubClass.class.isAssignableFrom(AbstractClass.class)) {
        AbstractSubClass.class.getMethod("myMethod", new Class[] { }).invoke(null, null);
    } else {
        // fallback
    }

Note that this has an issue if there are two classes of the same name in the same package. It will always choose the first one it finds. If that's what you want, you'll need to go out of your way to make sure that the classes are loaded only once. The solution is not as pretty, but if you have a decent understanding of how to use reflection then it should be straightforward. Basically, you have to walk through the method's classes (i.e., the class loader) until you get to the target one. The advantage here is that if the class is not loaded then you will have an exception. Tuesday, November 4, 2016
