A Memphis-based veterinarian has filed a civil complaint against a Memphis animal shelter, alleging the shelter deliberately euthanized animals by setting them free within hours of taking them into its custody and keeping them in cages as it processed applications for adoption. Dr. Joseph Chaplin claims in his complaint filed in Shelby County Circuit Court that staff at the Shelby County Animal Care and Control shelter "knew or should have known" that some animals in its custody may have been euthanized the previous day. The complaint claims that the shelter staff then failed to act when it took into its custody two dogs whose owners had surrendered them to other shelters for euthanasia. One of those dogs was the one-year-old son of a staffer, who according to the complaint, cried out "Mommy!" as the shelter workers euthanized him. "His cries were heard as two (shelter) workers euthanized him," the complaint states. The complaint also claims that a second dog, a 6-year-old black pit bull, that was surrendered to the shelter was taken to a "vacant room" where it was "forced" to stand inside a cage for over 15 hours, "with the cages doors open and its legs propped up on a small table so that there was room for the officers to walk inside," to a back room, where it was euthanized. The incident involving the pit bull took place on Oct. 12, 2015. However, Chaplin's complaint states that "highly similar allegations of egregious animal cruelty by staff at the Shelter took place in February, May, June and July of 2015." The complaint states that the dog was put in a "small cage to observe the effects" of the euthanasia drug and that "the dog was repeatedly prodded and poked with a needle by the euthanasia technician," adding "the dog's muzzles were pulled away from its face and its eyes were forcibly covered." For the second incident, the complaint states, the dog was "held in the cramped cage for hours without food, water or veterinary care." One day in June, the complaint states, the dog "was forcibly removed from the cramped cage by angry, aggressive shelter staff and taken in an ambulance to Le Bonheur Veterinary Clinic for a blood test." It states that "Le Bonheur determined that the dog was not dead or even close to death" as a result of the euthanasia
