FIFA 22 will launch on September 27, 2017 on PS4 and Xbox One and will be available for pre-order from Amazon and GAME. Check out this our FIFA 22 Reveal trailer: In FIFA 22, players will benefit from “Human Intelligence Transfer,” which enables the Real Player Motion Model to learn from players’ human actions and use the data to build the perfect human AI for real-life speed and skill of any player, even the most in-demand superstars of the world. The “HyperMotion Engine” will also be powering the title, in which all players will benefit from improved play and ball physics, new dribbling and shot mechanics, and a new ball control system. DID YOU KNOW? The Real Player Motion Model allows the FIFA interactive engine to learn from millions of high-quality, real-life actions, such as running, jumping, sprinting, punching, spinning, and changing direction. The Real Player Motion Model for player models will react to a player’s actions, such as running, when he approaches the ball, tackles, chases down a player, and attempts a shot or pass. This player intelligence is then transferred to a more human feel for gameplay, for example, allowing players to be faster than they have ever been. More playable action in FIFA 22 will include: An increased number of ball touches and sub-touches Reactions to defending in a new Hyper Running System A goalkeeper model which reacts to the positioning of defenders and the ball as well as reacting to shots More individual reactions for players, including explosive dribble runs and new precise starts and stops Improved skill moves and creation of new skills, including the ability to change direction while in possession of the ball New skill moves and footwork options Dribbling mechanics including new spin and finishing options To protect player identities, Unique Skills will be created by players. The Hyper Motion Engine is fed by the player data which is known as “HyperMotion Data,” which is captured and transferred via the Real Player Motion Model. More details on the new technology can be found below: Motion Capture The Real Player Motion Model for player models will react to a player’s actions, such as running,
