Subsequently, it handles the building process itself. Everything is done on the fly, at installation time. If you're looking for a quick way to deploy Java applications the program might be a good suggestion. Such as in the case where a new file appears, it will be the one that appears first. Deployment is easy with install4j. The amount of steps you go through can be reduced by providing various information for the application, with a couple of fields that have to be filled out and some command line parameters. Advanced features such as the use of files that are provided are easily customized. We all know that install4j is reliable, but have you ever wondered about the performance? Well, according to its creator, the speed is exactly what you would expect.
