The addition of FIFA HyperMotion Technology in Fifa 22 Cracked Version has been implemented in three key ways: Expanded player AI: Players will now be more aware of the player ahead of them and will take into account the previous and planned moves of the opposing player. Dynamic Player Runouts: After making a sprinting motion, players will now properly perform a defender's runout using the 3 key players' pass lanes to position the player in a better position to receive the ball. Improved Player Interaction: Players will now react to shots and passes using more accurate dynamic player feinting patterns. The system is designed to "augment how players interact with each other and the ball in order to increase a player's awareness and understanding of where the ball is." In addition to the above-mentioned features, FIFA 22 also offers a new "Exhibition" mode, which allows players to play out one-off games with the simulation running in real-time. FIFA 22 is available on PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC on September 28th in North America, Australia, and New Zealand and in Europe on September 15th. For more, check out the official FIFA 22 hub, where you can view our extensive collection of features and guides. A total of 22 players have been selected for inclusion in the 'Hyper Motion - 22 Real World Players Edition': Jermain Defoe, Timothy Fosu-Mensah, Anthony Martial, Kyle Walker, Eden Hazard, Angel Di Maria, Toni Kroos, Andrea Pirlo, Gonzalo Higuain, Ashley Young, Bastian Schweinsteiger, Samir Nasri, Andrei Arshavin, Thierry Henry, Toni Kroos, Koke, Manuel Neuer, Fernando Torres, Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain, Cesc Fabregas, Alexander Hleb and Fabian Schär. Each of the selected players have been given the opportunity to play through the entire match to showcase the technology in action. FIFA 20 made use of the same player data, as it was the first year where EA built and published FIFA using the same data as the FIFA video game. "HyperMotion" was tested in FIFA 20, but only on 1v1 matches and only in exhibition mode. Below are the exact stats for the players included in the 'HyperMotion - 22 Real World Players Edition'6/
