The new tech closely mimics real-world training by replicating the speed, intensity and unpredictability of in-game challenges. The exciting new gameplay mechanics give players more control of their attacking options, and allow players to make subtle movements to open up space and create space for attacking options. The team looks like a bad dream version of Manchester United, if anything is a bad dream version of Manchester United. The players' movements change from game to game, but the basic shape of the team remains relatively the same. New faces are on their way, though. A new manager is needed to keep the team fun, and on Saturday afternoon, a new gaffer was appointed for the only Premier League game available on Sunday, this time his first match with Manchester United was against Chelsea. Either way, Manchester United will need to make their mark with a new manager at the helm. Alex Ferguson has retired, David Moyes was more or less given the boot, and the club has been utterly shit during the 0-1 defeat to Southampton in the EFL Cup earlier this season, 2-0 away to a Southampton team on Sunday. It's safe to say that the short run of managers have not gone well for Manchester United. When they play, they don't show signs of good form; when they lose, it's even worse; a holiday in Greece surely has to be near the top of the list of worst places to be a Manchester United manager. Managers are going to need more than luck to keep the team from falling further than they have to date, and that's no small task. Manager history: Manchester United managers The dream career choice for a football manager isn't a glamorous one. A manager's job is, when you think about it, very similar to a journalist's. Both need to collect the same facts, then assemble them into a coherent narrative that allows everyone a fair idea of what happened. They need to stay true to the narrative throughout the process, even when the facts change, but also remain true to their values of journalistic integrity. A journalist who is working for a big news outlet is probably paid a fraction of what a journalist working for a smaller outlet is. But the thing that separates them is that journalists have a responsibility towards their readers. Journalists have the quality to admit they have been wrong about something and they must take responsibility

Test your skills in a new Exhibition Mode with new streamlined rules or live out your ultimate dream of playing at the national stadium with the new Match Day Mode. Can you feel the roar of the crowd? MODE-SPECIFIC CONTROLS Career Mode [mutation_content frame_color="#FF0000?"] Dribbling Get ready to feel the heat as you push the pace on the pitch. Keep the ball close to your body to stay balanced on the ball and evade defenders with intelligent dribbling moves. Feel the difference between a controlled touch and a reckless overhead pass as you explore the game's new dribbling options: Dribbling Skill (ASI) – An ASI indicator used to show other players where you want to pass or dribble, and gives your teammates control of the pace at which you move. Shoot Control (ASO) – An ASO indicator used to tell other players when you need to use a pass or go into a shot. Pass Control (ASH) – An ASH indicator used to let your teammates know when you're going to pass or dribble. Dribbling Accuracy Keep your teammates out of shooting range of the goal and use your dribbling skills to evade defenders. Aim carefully and use your dribbling to deceive defenders. Be aware of how quickly your opponents are reacting to your movements. [mutation_content frame_color="#FF0000?"] Shooting Be decisive with your shots and choose the direction they will go with a new ball placement system. The right flick can set you on your way, while the hard shot sends the ball towards the near post. The execution of each shot is vital. [mutation_content frame_color="#FF0000?"] Finishing Feel it when you connect the ball and score a goal, complete with animation. See the impact of your shot, keep hold of the ball, and avoid defenders who block the run. Do you have the skill to shoot and the luck to score? [mutation_content frame_color="#FF0000?"]
