Beads of crystalline polypropylene currently available have melting points, as measured by ASTM D3418, in the range of 140.degree. to 155.degree. C., and normally have melt indices of 0.2 to 1.5 g/10 minutes. The industry has continued to seek beads having higher melt indices and higher melting points. Melt index is indicative of the ability of the polymer to melt and become fluid in the heating step of a fabrication or injection molding operation and generally is the volume of the molten polymer which will flow through a given time at a specific temperature. Higher melt indices are desired to permit more economical molding operations. Various methods of increasing the melt indices of polypropylene have been suggested. U.S. Pat. No. 4,224,415 to Nestler et al discloses a process for producing a thermoplastic resin having an increased melt index by contacting a polypropylene with an organic solvent-soluble titanium compound. U.S. Pat. No. 4,169,249 to Gaudioso et al discloses a method for increasing the melt index of polypropylene by melt compounding the polypropylene with a gaseous blowing agent in the presence of a hydrogen donor, an organic peroxide and a metal halide salt of a p-phenylazo or a metal salt of an aromatic nitro compound in an inert organic diluent. U.S. Pat. No. 4,898,911 to Rohowetz discloses the use of supercritical CO<sub>2</sub> as a processing medium to increase the melt index of polypropylene. U.S. Pat. No. 4,520,170 to Monchick et al discloses the use of a silicon alkyl ketone as a nucleophile in the copolymerization of propylene with an.alpha.-olefin in the presence of hydrogen to increase the melt index of the polypropylene. U.S. Pat. No. 4,379,910 to Werner discloses a method of increasing the melt index of polypropylene by heating a polypropylene with hydrogen in the presence of an ethylenically unsaturated compound having a lone pair of electrons and a crystallinity index of 0.7 or more. It is an object of this invention to provide propylene polymers having melt indices higher than currently available resins and methods for their preparation. The 23-year-old,

---

---

Alcohol and Alcoholism 101
Alcohol and the Industry Alcohol is the most commonly abused substance in our society.
And while many individuals think of drinking as an individual matter, the reality is that drinking patterns and behavior follow social trends.
According to the Center for

Disease Control, in 2005 there were 7,377 alcohol-related traffic fatalities, which is a 20% increase in fatality rates from 4 years earlier. One drink (2 oz.) of alcohol is related to a 4% increase in traffic accidents. The risk for experiencing a death in a motor vehicle accident increases with alcohol consumption as well. A glass of wine or a beer before driving is related to the greatest risk. In fact, it is strongly recommended that alcohol consumption be limited to two drinks or less before driving. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), the following are the top contributing factors associated with causing

---

---

automobile accidents: Use of cell phones while driving – 25% Drunk driving – 25% Speeding – 24% Driving while distracted – 22% According to the NHTSA, sober drivers are responsible for 22% of automobile accidents. Drunks are responsible for 25% of the accidents. And people distracted by their cell phones are the next biggest contributor to accidents, at 25%. What are the Signs and Symptoms of Alcoholism? If you or your loved one is suffering from addiction to alcohol or have recently begun to drink or use drugs excessively, there are several possible warning signs that could indicate a problem exists. As with any illness, addiction is a complex condition that can be far more difficult to detect than some other diseases. However, the signs are many and often are easily recognized. Any individual who thinks that he or she may have a drinking problem should speak to a health care professional right away to determine if he or she should seek professional help.

With the proliferation of problems associated with the use of alcohol, many people want to know “what to do if you see or suspect alcoholism.” While there is no simple answer, there are some basic things that you can do to help yourself, and help those you love, if they are suffering from the effects of alcoholism. There are many ways that alcohol abuse affects an individual's life. It can affect work performance, relationships, as well as loved ones. While there is no simple answer to these difficult questions,
