The neuroendocrine conundrum of insulin and its relevance to obesity and type 2 diabetes. Adults and children with type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2DM) and obesity-associated Type 2 diabetes mellitus (OAT2DM) are simultaneously plagued by a spectrum of abnormalities including glucose and lipid imbalances, dyslipidaemia, hypertension, insulin resistance (IR) and other manifestations of the Metabolic Syndrome X (MSX). The MSX phenotype can be considered a manifestation of progressive 'neuroendocrine dysfunction' in which insulin deficiency and impaired beta-cell responsiveness are linked to disease-promoting inflammatory responses. The transition from impaired insulin secretion to severe insulin deficiency in T2DM presents an attractive target for therapeutic intervention, but is dependent on the presence of intact beta-cell mass. In this review, we consider the contribution of beta-cell failure and that of impaired insulin secretion to the development of the MSX phenotype, and review the evidence that the restoration of impaired insulin secretion, and the prevention of beta-cell failure, may provide the best chance of bringing metabolic dysfunction under control.

Q: How to retrieve all posts of a topic with parentid_like : %? I have the following models: @has_many :posts, :dependent => :destroy @has_many :topic_posts, :through => :posts I can retrieve posts of a topic with the following query: Person.joins(:topic_posts).where('topic_posts.parent_id_eq'=> :topic_id) Is it possible to retrieve the entire topic with all posts? Something like: Person.joins(:topic_posts).all A: You'll need an additional join so you don't end up adding multiple topic_posts on topic_id. Person.joins("INNER JOIN topic_posts ON topic_posts.parent_id = person.id") .where("topic_posts.parent_id_eq " + topic_id + "") Also note that is better to use table or table_name.id in where clause when you don't need to reference the id. In a recent interview with Gigwise, Matt Goss of Evanescence had this to say about making a new album: "I'm writing now and I'm really happy with my new material for the first time in a while
