One particular application is in street lighting to provide illumination for a roadway. A basic street light uses a number of low power LEDs coupled together to generate a single point of illumination. For a given power rating, these individual LEDs provide very little illumination. Moreover, although these systems provide for relatively low power consumption, the system efficiency of an LED lighting system does not account for the reduction in efficiency due to the fraction of light emitted that is reflected off of the roadway pavement and does not contribute illumination.Rigli Light Railway The Rigli Light Railway () is a long railway line in the Swiss canton of Ticino, which was opened in 1902 and electrified in 2003.
