Q: Ruby Namespacing Object method I'm new to Ruby. I have an object that has some methods in it. class MyObject # Some Methods end I want to create a method within the object that is available to objects that extend the object but is not visible outside of the object. class MyObject def self.method_that_is_accessible_to_objects # Methods end end I want MyObject.method_that_is_accessible_to_objects to be available to other objects within the class but not available to the rest of the world. I've tried adding @ to the method_that_is_accessible_to_objects, but then I get an undefined method error. Is what I'm trying to do possible or do I have to namespace my objects? A: You need to make the method private to the object, but accessible to objects that extend the class. The following will work: class MyObject private def self.method_that_is_accessible_to_objects # Methods end end If you wanted to make the method public, you would make it a public method, like so: class MyObject def self.method_that_is_accessible_to_objects # Methods end public def method_that_is_accessible_to_objects # Methods end end Then, any class that extends MyObject would be able to see method_that_is_accessible_to_objects, but no other code outside of MyObject would be able to call it. Q: ACF - Displaying image URL field created using input format I have an ACF field which returns an image using it's input format. I was wondering how I can output the URL of that image as a single variable. I've tried using the callback, however, that doesn't seem to be working: $temp_img = get_field('render_image'); $temp_img_w = $temp_img[1]['width']; $temp_img_h = $temp_img[1]['height']; $imgurl = image_load_url($temp_img[0
