Sports Interactive has brought together the most accurate and realistic player movements to date in FIFA's AI and animations, so that players can play with maximum ability. The introduction of HyperMotion Technology is one of several new ways to take the control and gameplay of FIFA into a new era. Hello everyone. I'm your host Richard Skinner, along with the man in the middle Dermot Corrigan, we're here to talk the introduction of 'HyperMotion Technology' which is used in the new FIFA. I remember the first time I played FIFA 19 - it was a bit different and it was a bit muddy. Now here we are and it's another big change. This is really key, the way we play the game. So let's start in with the method behind the madness and then we can take a look at what has changed. The First Look Ok, this is the first one - you have something like this. First and foremost, you've got the main menu - with Kick Off as your cover. You have your Profile, My Career and Set-up. This is the thing that stays the same - this is what stays the same. You've still got Real Player Motion and before you can do anything, you've got to do this. And you've still got Options, such as the Report Panel. But going to the coach, which is the next one... You've got the same coaching options, you've still got online and you've still got the FIFA Ultimate Team. You've still got the same Icons, such as Set Up and Training - which is the next one. You've still got your Contracts. There's still the same way to swap around your players. You've got to still go into the injury report, which is the next one. But when you're at this moment, you're at the Careers screen. So there's still the same options, but now you're here, you've got the new and improved Career. So the first change in this is obviously the Career. Now you've got the Motions here. And you've got the Player Analysis here.

FIFA stands for "Fédération Internationale de Football Association." It's FIFA is the best soccer video game series produced by EA Sports, so it's not like I'm getting sales figures wrong. It comes from EA. The game has been a huge success since the first FIFA came out in 1992. Why is FIFA 22 such a huge deal? In the past few years, the series has been on a quiet decline. It seemed like the game had lost its identity, and it became difficult for developers to find ways to innovate. But now, we're seeing a sea change in development direction. The games are fun again. They're very tight. They feature several new features that make them easier to play. And for the first time, it seems like the series is actually competing with its own release. Here's a summary of all the things that FIFA 22 has to offer: NBA 2K (2017) NBA 2K is the best basketball video game, and it's a weird experience to say that. NBA 2K is so good that it makes other basketball video games look more than a little buggy and chunky. It plays like the real sport. It's fun to play. But it's also awkward to do so. I can't give you a rundown of what you'll like about NBA 2K because everything about it seems great. It's a supremely polished experience that makes every basketball game you play feel like NBA 2K. I'm not saying that FIFA 22 is bad. I'm not saying that FIFA 22 is good. I'm not saying that FIFA 22 is amazing. What I am saying is that the previous games were flawed. 2K played like an NBA 2K game. FIFA played like an EA FIFA game. And that's a relief. EA has been getting in trouble recently, and this is a chance to put some of the bad vibes to rest. EA launched the Under Armour Edition of FIFA for the first time in a while earlier this year. This edition is free. It's the first-ever full-body motion tracking experience for FIFA, and it lets you unlock various pieces of clothing that you've never had access to before. Best of all, you can do it on all 32 teams. I'm a huge fan of the Under Armour Edition, and I think that it's going to be a huge success. On the pitch, FIFA 22 is the best the series has bc9d6d6daa
