Basic tools Two types of tools can help you edit images in Photoshop: * Direct selection tools enable you to select an object or shape by moving the cursor over it. * Magic wand tools enable you to select an object by moving the cursor over an image. The cursor changes to a crosshairs with four corners at the corners of the image, indicating that you're about to select the tool. After you select the tool, the crosshairs dim and then, when you release the mouse button, the tool highlights the object that you select. You can access these tools through the Home tab's Select panel (refer to Figure 7-1) or by pressing Ctrl+A (Option+A on a Mac). To open the Select panel, choose Home⇒Select, or press Ctrl+A. Choose one of the Direct Selection tools (from the Select drop-down menu) or the Magic Wand tool (from the toolbox icon next to the Select tool) by selecting the tool from the Select toolbox. If the tools are grouped together on the left side of the Select toolbox, as shown in Figure 7-9, then you can group the tools to activate the group (after you select a tool in the Select toolbox). FIGURE 7-9: You can activate tools from the Select toolbox. Select a tool directly in the image. As you do so, icons for the tool appear at the upper-left and upper-right corners of the image. These icons indicate the tool's selection behavior, as shown in Figure 7-10: The Select tool acts like a plus (+) icon, indicating that a selection is active. The Rectangular tool acts like a crosshairs with square corners (solid white line). The Elliptical Marquee tool acts like a crosshairs with a rounded end (dotted white line). FIGURE 7-10: To select an object, move the cursor over it and release the mouse button. You can also access the Direct Selection tools by choosing Select⇒Modify⇒Select, or pressing Alt+D. You can also

Top 5 Photoshop The best and top Photoshop alternatives to create a website, cover up your photo or edit it is Photoshop. Having a good website is a great way to share and get more traffic to your service or the business you are working for. With all the amazing tools that come with the Adobe's Photoshop, it is perfect for those who want to make some pretty cool and attractive websites and business covers. If you are interested in learning how to make a simple but cool cover for a website or mobile app, then Photoshop and this guide will help you out. By the end of this Photoshop course, you'll be able to create a cover for your own business or website with the help of this guide. If you're a beginner, I recommend you watch our Photoshop Beginner & Intermediate classes Here are the best Photoshop alternatives, ranked by their popularity on the basis of web traffic: 1. Canva Canva is my favorite image editor to design your cover because I don't like to complicate things, so I try to use a free and easy tool. Canva is one of the most popular websites to generate tons of creative images and a lot of people use it to create their own business logos, letterheads, posters, flyers, and business cards. However, some people who use Photoshop to design their business covers or even images say that Canva has a few limitations. Download Canva 2. GIMP If Canva is for beginners and Photoshop is for the pros, then GIMP is for the middle-level users. It is also one of the most popular graphics editing software on the market, and millions of people use it to create their own photos, logos, illustrations, and more. Still, there are quite a few limitations and users report having some difficulties when it comes to using GIMP, so if you are interested in adding a little more to your photography skills, you may want to visit GIMP's website and read through the tutorial there. Download GIMP 3. Office Depot Office Depot has some really good photo editing tools that can help you create some really cool covers. Now, it doesn't have the most advanced editing tools like Photoshop and GIMP have but as far as free photo editing tools go, it's pretty close to them. Download Office 388ed7b0c7

Q: How can I send a GET request to an IP address but get a 404 response? I know I can get a 404 error by trying to send a GET request to a specific IP address in Node.js with a simple function like this: `const http = require('http'); const fetch = require('node-fetch'); // This will fail because the IP address hasn't been whitelisted const sendRequest = (req, res) => { http.get('', res); };` Is there a more elegant way to achieve this? I want to send a GET request to an IP address and get a 404 response, not a 403. A: This will not cause a 404 response but you will lose the request tracking and information from the request as explained here: Invalid port number `const request = require('request'); // Will cause a 404 error request('', (err, httpResponse, body) => { console.log(err, httpResponse, body); }) // Will work but you won't be able to see the request in the normal way request('').on('response', (httpResponse) => { console.log(httpResponse); }).on('data', (chunk) => { console.log('BODY:' + chunk); });` Screening of the human endothelial differentiation inhibitor gene. We have isolated the cDNA encoding the human endothelial differentiation inhibitor, a protein of 111 amino acids. The protein was highly expressed in adult brain and fetal lung, but not in adult lung, liver, kidney, placenta, thymus, or spleen. However, it was detected in the mesoderm-derived cells such as a human embryonic kidney cell line (HEK293) and a murine mesenchymal cell line (MS-5) in addition to endothelial cells and peripheral blood mononuclear cells. Immunocytochemical analysis showed the expression of the protein mainly in the nuclei of the cells from the mesoderm-derived cell lines. Timour, an Afghan boy who is undergoing rehabilitation in Saudi Arabia after spending two years trapped in a cave, has become an unlikely icon for peace across the Middle East and beyond. But the 18-year-old insists a series of messages he has posted on social media, despite warnings from the Afghan government that doing so could be considered treason, has been therapeutic in allowing him to vent his anger at the war he witnessed during years spent trapped. During his time spent in the tight confines of the cave, where he was regularly fed by his rescuers, he was compelled to make more than 1,000 phone calls home every day to his family, who have been desperately trying to reach him. But the cave, in the Wakhan region of Afghanistan, where he was discovered by the police more than two weeks ago with his parents, is in a deserted area of the country and the security situation there is volatile. Timour's father, Mohammad Roshan, who is also a police officer, was able to send his son an encrypted message to let him know his parents were alive, but they still cannot reach Timour, who has been medicated since the rescue. Timour is receiving daily physiotherapy and learning how to use his crutches. Photographs circulating online show the young asylum seeker cutting an imposing figure, his face smeared with mud as he recovers from his ordeal. After a lavish welcoming ceremony by the Saudi authorities, Roshan has been placed in a living quarters on the grounds of the rehabilitation centre where he can continue to receive treatment. "When he came out, I hugged him and when I did he said: 'Leave me alone, I will slap you'," Roshan says in a translated statement he gave to the Guardian last week. "He told me to leave him alone. He was very angry and asked me: 'What is this?'" Timour's caretakers hope that when he is well enough, he will be able to go home. But that will take a lot of preparation. Timour's mother, Najiba, wonders if he should be trying to rehabilitate himself instead of being holed up in a cave while the world goes on around him. "I ask my friends, 'why did you go to the cave? Are you not thinking about
