When you're ready to start manipulating images, take a look at the several books on the market that teach you how to use Photoshop (see the later section "Photoshop Online Community, Documentation, and Tutorials"). Photoshop includes many tools for the creation of graphics. It enables you to add and apply effects, to convert raster (bitmap) images to vector (also known as a shape or raster images), to draw and edit pictures, to create objects, and to render colors. Beyond the basics, Photoshop offers advanced features such as layer masks, which are used to create layers with special effects. You can also set up a graduated filter that applies different filters or image adjustments to different areas of an image. In the next sections, I describe all these various tools. The Basic Drawing Tools Photoshop makes drawing easy. It makes even the most detailed drawings look effortless and draws your attention away from the process of drawing. The toolbox that you need to draw and edit images is basic and consists of just a few tools. After you master these tools, you can achieve anything you want without having to get lost in a lot of adjustments and tasks. Figure 2-1 illustrates the basic drawing tools provided by Photoshop. You can see only the horizontal toolbox by default. To view the options available to you, choose View⇒Toolbox or press Ctrl+T (⌘-T) to activate the Toolbox pane. Figure 2-1: The drawing toolbox includes the Pen tool, the Shape tool, the Zoom tool, the Selection tool, the Eraser tool, and the Brush tool. From left to right on the Toolbox options are as follows: Pen tool: The Pen tool enables you to draw lines and shapes. In addition to basic drawing shapes and arrows, you also have the option to make a directional path based on the direction of your strokes with the Stroke Direction tool or to make a proportional path based on the distance you draw. The Pen tool can also use tools such as the Eraser tool, the Polygon tool, and the Object Tracking tool, which makes your drawings and shapes move automatically as you fill the area selected. The Pen tool is helpful for drawing with just a few strokes. However, it lacks speed and precision, so you can use the different tools available in the Toolbox to create a much more precise and faster design. The Pen tool's shape options include Rect

Q: Hibernate Multiple Named Queries not working Ok, I've spent hours of searching forums and documentation etc. to make this work, but no joy so far. I have a hierarchy of classes. Project has multiple subsidiaries and I want to return the child classes as well as the Project class. This is my HQL: SELECT this, FROM Project as this WHERE this.id = :id UNION SELECT this.subsidiaries FROM Project as this WHERE this.id = :id The DB has several projects with subsidiaries but the :id is not null. I have a mapped hierarchy of the project class too. I'm getting an exception: org.hibernate.QueryException: could not resolve property: subsidiaries of: Which makes sense, I have no subsidiaries, or I've made a mistake with the HQL. Also, the project is not null. UPDATE: I've tried this based on the recommendations, with a.add(Subsidiary.class) etc. but I'm getting the same exception: SELECT this, from Project as this WHERE this.id = :id UPDATE Once my HQL works, I have a new exception I can't solve: org.hibernate.StaleStateException: Batch update returned unexpected row count from update [0]; actual row count: 0; expected: 1 I'm slightly confused about this, it's confusing me a bit more. I have a batch size of 100, so I'm not sure why it's updating with 0 rows. It may help if I say that if I only select Projects with subsidiaries then it all works fine. UPDATE: I've successfully solved this, I think, by having a Junction in the Project class. I changed the JPA annotation on the Project class to this:
