However, editing photos at their finest requires the use of a program that offers Photoshop-like features such as layers and transparency. Some of these features are built into Photoshop's editing tools. For example, Photoshop's brush tool has a Path or Mask feature. However, layers make Photoshop a real pleasure to work with, allowing you to do things such as create from scratch or apply a gradient or an emboss effect to images. Pages Feb 22, 2018 One part of the problem with website performance is that it's sort of "don't see." If you don't visit the site at a time when it happens to be having a peak of activity, you may never know what the problem is. I have seen sites that perform poorly because a website analyzer is running in the background and is reporting that the server is being loaded with lots of requests. But to someone on a weekly basis, the site may be fine! So if you're building websites, you could start thinking about how you can expose yourself to more data points. For example, with a PHP script, you could log as much data as you want and check it in a script while your website is running. You might want to log the number of database queries, the number of PHP function calls, the number of requests made, and a host of other information. So, you want to log a lot of data. But how do you do that? Let's look at three PHP scripts that can help you log a lot of data. These scripts aren't necessarily the best way to handle it, but you can sort of see an idea about how they work. Keep in mind that these are just examples and you can put your own print statements or calls to any function in there. wget.sh The first option for logging a lot of data is a script called wget.sh (a wget command line script). This script is built to get data out of a website and aggregate it. It logs a lot of data in a CSV file. But you don't have to use it for that. You can call it from your PHP script directly. You'll need to install it first if you don't already have it. (Note: There are other ways to do this, but this is a simple one. You might want to look at this or this page for more information about installing it.) Then, you need to run wget.sh. The script will ask you a couple questions to set up the type of data you'd like to get. It will then take it a bit and spit it all back out. The script has a lot more options than what I've described, but this is a simple script that can help you log a lot of data. ResourceMonitor.sh ResourceMonitor.sh is another script written to help keep an eye on your website's

The disclosed invention relates to a shipping apparatus and method that includes a shipping storage container with a fold-able or stowable end wall that automatically stores and facilitates the transfer of a shipping container to and from a truck bed. The reoccurring problem of shipping a product between locations such as a manufacturer and a retailer has in recent years been solved in part by "knockdown" shipping trays. Traditionally, such shipping trays are formed to rest entirely flat upon a shipping pallet. A raised label is often applied to the shipping pallet to identify the location and contents of the shipping tray. The shipping pallet is typically a wooden pallet that is converted from a flat shipping tray by folding the top and sides of the shipping tray upward toward the shipping pallet. Such a configuration permits freight to be shipped in a more compact manner. Such folding of a shipping tray in a shipping container is typically done manually and creates significant labor expense. As recognized by the present invention, fold-able or stowable shipping trays have been formed to include an end wall or panel that is foldable or stowable into a shipping container. A shipping container with a fold-able or stowable end wall is described in U.S. Pat. No. 5,876,001, the entire disclosure of which is incorporated by reference herein. The '001 patent describes a shipping container with a foldable or stowable end wall that includes a top surface, an end wall that extends downwardly from the top surface, and a hinge means for permitting the end wall to fold downwardly into the shipping container. Another folding container is described in U.S. Pat. No. 5,261,760, the entire disclosure of which is incorporated by reference herein. The '760 patent describes a folding container with a foldable end wall or top. A sliding bottom is integrally formed with the top. A plurality of rungs is also integrally formed with the top. The rungs are disposed on the bottom of the folding container for folding the container into an elongated, flat configuration. Yet another such container is described in U.S. Pat. No. 5,438,739, the entire disclosure of which is incorporated by reference herein. The '739 patent describes a shipping container with a foldable or stowable end wall that is operated by a motor. The '739 patent describes a case having a bottom and a side wall. The side wall
