See the Complete Guide to Adobe Photoshop CS6 for more information about working with Photoshop on this version of the program. ## Making It Easy to Master Graphics Adobe Photoshop is a very intuitive program that has an extremely user-friendly interface that appeals to both beginners and professionals alike. Unfortunately, the interface means that designing is not necessarily the most efficient way to use Photoshop. The most efficient way for you to access Photoshop on your computer is to open a new image from the Windows open dialog box and use the Open command to open a file. However, finding the right image to open may require you to search the computer's hard drive or just open up your browser window and hit the Google Image Search button on your keyboard. The first time you open Photoshop, an `_assistant_` or `_resource_` icon appears in the lower-left corner of the Photoshop window. When you click the assistant icon (circled in Figure 8-3), you see a set of tutorials and other helpful tools. Most of these tutorials are found within the Edit tab. The Favorites tab also includes a few helpful tools, such as commands for rotating and resizing an image. Figure 8-3: The assistant icon lets you easily access a variety of tutorials. Photoshop includes not one, but two very powerful `_layers_` editing features. For most people, layers make it easier to share your graphics with others or to create a number of different types of effects. A layer is a separate part of an image that holds all the information. You can define, name, layer, edit, and order layer information as you work on a document. Each layer has its own opacity, which controls how much of the underlying image is visible. You can easily hide and display layers as needed. When you're finished working on an image, you can save as a single file and embed your work in a final version of the document. This final version is often referred to as a `_psd_` or `_photoshop document._` Figure 8-4 shows a multilayered Photoshop document. You can easily access the layers from the Layers panel. Photoshop allows you to easily create and modify layers, as well as work on large, complex projects, using a limited number of tools. But I recommend limiting your use of Photoshop to creating photo prints for the time being. Most of the time, using Photoshop for large graphics for digital printing is prohibitively expensive.

Conservative commentator Rick Santorum said on Wednesday that Jesus would have supported Donald Trump's proposed Muslim ban. "Christians all over the country, if they read the Sermon on the Mount, they would agree with Donald Trump's comments," Santorum told a reporter from CNN. "We have a responsibility to protect the world from terrorists." He cited Trump's proposal that there be a "total and complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States," arguing that Jesus would have supported the idea. "Jesus Christ, he would be here today, probably advocating for what Trump is doing," Santorum said. "I believe that you absolutely have to have surveillance, and I think you absolutely have to have border security." MOST POPULAR In his remarks, Santorum said there is no contradiction between supporting border security and "extreme vetting," the policy for screening foreigners that has been implemented by the Trump administration. "I believe that you absolutely have to have border security. And I think you absolutely have to have extreme vetting," Santorum said. Santorum on Wednesday met with Trump for the first time since the businessman's election as president. The Trump-Santorum alliance appeared far-fetched, because the 2012 GOP presidential nominee has been one of Trump's most vocal critics in recent weeks. Trump declined to endorse in the GOP presidential primary on his former rival, Texas Sen. Ted Cruz. Cruz has been leading the early polls since March, and Santorum has not been a factor in the Republican nomination race. During Wednesday's meeting, Trump said Santorum is "a great person" and "a good man." Any of you guys have problems with seperating shoe laces/snap ties? Have you ever wanted to contribute to the Mythical Cyberspace? If you have ever had the urge to be an author, artist, or simply a creative and you have found a technical problem difficult to solve, then you may want to apply to the Al Manar Foundation. Contents The Al Manar Foundation is a space probe that was constructed by humans in the year 1970, in order to send out knowledge to all of humanity. It is currently orbiting around the Earth, and is recording images, data and information, and processing this information. The Al Manar Foundation has three components: a control module, an attitude mechanism, and an instrumentation module. The control module houses the main processor; it allows the Foundation to receive data from the instrumentation module, and data from outside sources. The attitude mechanism allows the control module to adjust its position and rotation. The instrumentation module controls the radiation detection device, the plasma scanner, and the ground sensor. The entire Foundation is protected by a solar cell. While the Al Manar Foundation is a space probe and a scientific investigation, there are many people who have wanted to contribute to this cause. This is because the Foundation has been bombarded with messages from all over the world that it has handled for a short time, and the constant influx of information that it processes is being sent to the Foundation by individuals who want to communicate with humanity. The Al Manar Foundation has its share of risks, as the entire Foundation and its instruments are exposed to Earth's magnetic field, cosmic radiation, and solar winds. As the Foundation has been in a state of continuous radio contact with Earth, it has interacted with many people who have had an effect on the Foundation and the people of Earth, such as the personalities such as Billy Roberts, the rogue signals from the Amaterasu, the being Electromagnetix, the Roswell alien Project, and the representation of thoughts within the Foundation itself. The people who have been the most influential in the Foundation are most likely to be the people who have been able to solve the technical problems of the Foundation, such as processor design, memory allocation, and disk management. The people with the best intentions in the Foundation are most likely to be those who have contributed to the project through participation in the Al Manar Foundation's Project Great Idea. They are people who are able to put an innovative spin on the Foundation's technological problems, and who are able to apply outside knowledge to the Foundation in order to overcome them
