All 22 of these real-life players were tested on Xbox One, with MotionScan being used to collect the data. Some of the players, like Lionel Messi, Michael Essien, Xavi and Gonzalo Higuain, were previously used in the 2014 FIFA World Cup Brazil – Motion Kit game. A similar process is also used in FIFA 19, as well as FIFA 18. The detailed motion capture data collected from these players is combined with several automated data sets to capture on-the-ball behaviour, such as speed, acceleration and body position, and they are all used to create new game features like attacking swipes, more accurate ball contact and fully-realistic passing. “Achieving the highest player authenticity in our sports games is a priority,” said Peter Pham, vice president of Marketing at EA SPORTS. “That’s why we have spent the last three years working closely with the world’s biggest and most experienced teams. Each of them has helped us test the latest in game development technologies to achieve the best possible result for our fans.”
