Unite Statement on the Plebgate Mailbox Affair 29 August 2015 The day after the Mailbox Affair, in which Unite members from Westminster cleaners to food handlers were accused of being the source of a false story which started a political scandal in the UK and led to the resignation of Prime Minister David Cameron, the Press recognised that part of the incident also involved the misclassification of the smallest class of worker. This mistake should not have occurred but it was recognised by the company's management and the company has apologised and compensated members. A thorough investigation by Unite has shown that this was a human error and the union will be assisting management in finding a suitable workplace for members at the Upper Street depot from which many of them work. Unite's regional officer for the Midlands and the North at the Drapers Building Society is Gareth Nicholson MP: "I was appalled to learn about the day-to-day existence of workers who are classified as 'misc'. The greater issue of course is that a number of Unite members were falsely accused of lying to journalists." Gareth added: ♦ b7e8fdf5c8
