Business Minister Simon Coveney has said “serious questions” must be answered after it was revealed that the cost of housing people with disabilities in Dublin has tripled in five years. Figures recently published show the cost of providing accommodation for people with mobility and other disabilities has risen from €33,335 per person in 2011 to €87,180 per person in 2015, a huge increase of more than threefold. In the same period the cost of providing supportive accommodation for those living with intellectual disability has jumped from €3,540 to €11,696 per person. The figure for North Dublin Disability Action’s national ‘home from home’ service has gone from €3,291 in 2011 to €12,939 in 2015. The service provides supported accommodation for people living with disabilities and their families. Speaking after the publication of the figures, Coveney said there was an “urgent need” to establish a commission of investigation into the issue. “The figures are a significant cause for concern,” he said. “On the basis of current trends it is expected that the number of people accommodated in supported accommodation will reach

17,000 by 2020. As a result, while the number of people in supported accommodation is increasing, it is expected that the number of places in supported accommodation will remain limited in the near future. “However, the cost of providing such accommodation is ballooning and simply cannot be absorbed by the state,” he added. “As a result, there is an urgent need to establish a commission of investigation into the issue.” The latest figures show that people with intellectual disability are five times more likely to be living in supported accommodation than people with mobility impairment and double the number of people living in supported accommodation than those with mental illness. Demand for supported accommodation has gone up in recent years due to the growing numbers of people who require it. However, the Department of the Environment estimates that even if no more people are accommodated
