A: If you are trying to compare the content of a drive on a user directory, you can use the %CD% environment variable. For example: @echo %CD% will print to the screen the path of the currently selected drive. From the same documentation: CD /? %CD% Display the current directory. So a typical command could be: set str=C:\Temp\ set str2=C:\Users\A\Desktop\ if "%CD%" == "%str%" echo Hi! A: You may be seeing this because each drive is appended with a drive letter before the local path. You can use the CD command to see the drive you are currently on. Example CD C:\Users\B\Desktop\ Search engines are often used to search for relevant and/or useful information on the World Wide Web (WWW) or other types of communication networks (e.g., enterprise networks). These search engines typically include search index that
